Meet The Animal: Hippopotamus

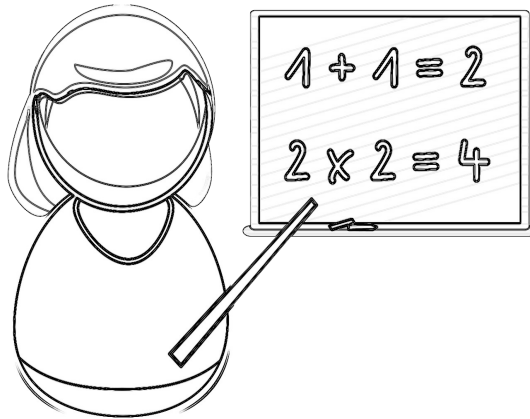

After elephants and rhinoceros, the hippopotamus is the next largest land mammal. Adult males, or bulls, weigh around 3,260 lbs. and 3,009 for females, or cows. Male hippos appear to continue growing throughout their lives, while females stop at the age of 25. A hippos life span is typically 40-50 years.

Hippos inhabit rivers, lakes, and mangrove swamps. Mating and birth both occur in the water. Hippos spend their day in the water and mud keeping cool, they do this as a group. However when they graze for food, this is done alone, even so they do not display territorial behavior on land. The majority of their diet consists of short grasses, but they will eat fruit if it's available, and have been known to eat meat on occasion

Hippos are among the most dangerous animals in the world due to their aggressive and unpredictable nature. They are threatened by habitat loss and poaching for their meat and ivory (canine teeth).

Do you like hippos? Have you ever played the game "Hungry Hippos"? Why not play it after reading this.

Community Worker: Teacher

A teacher is a person who helps students acquire knowledge, competence, or virtue through the practice of teaching. In most countries formal teaching of students is usually carried out by paid professional teachers in a school. However, a teacher can also be a parent who homeschools their children at home.

In order to become a professional teacher one needs to attend college and obtain a bachelors degree in education, which usually takes four years of schooling. They also must become certified.
